ABSTRACT

The selective bibliography of 383 currently available resource materials is to be used as a guide for the purpose of selecting grade K-12 instructional materials by and about American Indians that will help children attain positive self images. The books, records, cassettes, transparencies, kits, charts, maps, filmstrips, slides, and games listed provide accurate portrayals of the heritage, history, and heroes of Native Americans. The materials are arranged in four sections: (1) Dewey Decimal Classification, providing an author main entry with necessary information about grade levels, publishers, publishing dates from 1963-1977, prices, and brief annotations; (2) Alphabetical Index, used as an index to Section 1, with materials arranged in one alphabetical listing by author, title, and subject; (3) Curriculum Arrangement, giving suggested curriculum areas and grade levels; and (4) Sources and Resources, containing information to assist in achieving and enhancing educational equity of all Montgomery County (MD) Public School students. Section 4 materials include a 50 item annotated bibliography of bibliographies on American Indian educational resource materials, a 20 item annotated list of free and inexpensive learning materials about native Americans, an address list of American Indian organizations, and evaluation guidelines for selecting materials about native Americans. FOCUS ON PEOPLE

INTRODUCTION

The Department of Instructional Resources is continuing its efforts to provide MCPS personnel with appropriate, up-to-date materials which will help children to attain positive self images. This series focuses on several minority groups and highlights curriculum materials which provide accurate portrayals of the heritage, history, and heroes of these minority groups.

This series also highlights some of the sources and resources available to assist in achieving and enhancing educational equity for all MCPS students.

Titles in this series will include The Native American, Black Americans, Hispanic Americans, Asian Americans, The Middle East Americans, Women, and The Special Child.

The Native American updates materials included in People: Annotated Multiethnic Bibliography K-12, Summer 1973.

UTILIZATION NOTE

This is a selective bibliography of currently available resource materials to be used as a guide for the purpose of selecting instructional materials by and about American Indians. (For 16mm films please consult your current catalog.)

The materials listed are arranged in four sections:

1. Dewey Decimal Classification -
   Number with author main entry. Necessary information about grade levels, publishers, prices, and annotations are given in this section.
2. Alphabetical Index -
   Use as an index to Section 1. All materials are arranged in one alphabetical listing by author, title, and subject.
3. Curriculum Arrangement -
   Suggested curriculum areas and grade levels are given in this section.
4. Sources and Resources

CONTRIBUTORS

Mrs. Monica Suchoski, librarian, was the major contributor to this bibliography. The Processing Services staff must be recognized as a unit because of its numerous contributions. In addition, we would like to thank the following persons:

OFFICE OF INDIAN EDUCATION	INFORMATION KIT FOR TITLE IV, PART A INDIAN EDUCATION ACT OF 1972
INDIAN EDUCATION: A MESSAGE FOR SCHOOL PERSONNEL	CODE M-3 DATE 9/3/76

INTRODUCTION

Part A of Title IV (the Indian Education Act of 1972) provides money to school districts for the special educational needs of Indian children. To apply for the money, each school district must have an Indian parent committee, to help shape and direct its Title IV, Part A projects. In order to encourage greater involvement by Indian parents, the Office of Indian Education has sponsored the development of a Title IV, Part A Information Kit.

SPECIAL PROBLEMS OF INDIAN CHILDREN

School personnel are familiar with the special educational problems of Indian children. These problems include poor performance on standardized tests, sporadic attendance of classes, and a relatively high dropout rate. These problems arise from needs that are not being met through regular education channels.

Review of Present Conditions

The origin of these problems and needs can be better understood from a review of the present conditions in which many Indian children live. Many Indian children live in a family characterized as follows:

1. an average income of $2,000 – about one-fifth that of the average American family
2. an unemployment rate ten times the national average
3. a life expectancy 20 years less than for other Americans
4. a death rate from accidents, homicide and disease that is eight times the national average
5. a low level of education – 34% of Indians graduate from high school, compared to 54% for other Americans
6. a different language and different cultural traditions in the home.

With these kinds of problems, it is not surprising that Indian children have not performed well in school.

PAST ATTEMPTS AT IMPROVEMENT

Before 1870, the education of Indians was influenced by missionaries. The missionaries sought to replace Indian cultures with that of the white man.

There was a brief yet very successful period when Indian groups (Choctaw and Cherokee) had their own schools and a resulting high literacy rate.

From 1870 until about 1930, the Federal government took over the education of Indians. The government tried to remake the Indian into the image of the white farmer, by breaking up reservations into small farms and emphasizing farming, English and other basics in education.

From 1930 to 1960 the state public schools assumed responsibility for Indian education, with better results. Educational policies emphasized use of reservation resources and development of industrial skills. While Indian student enrollment increased, progress was still slow.

In the 1960s there was a general increase in awareness of minority people, including Indians. Efforts were made to close the educational gap between Indians and non-Indians, but there were still problems.

Suggestions from Indian Leaders

When asked about these difficulties, Indian leaders said the main reason was that non-Indians controlled the education of Indians. They said that few non-Indian teachers understood or shared the values of Indian students. Also, they said, Federal aid meant for Indians often went to a general school fund rather than being used specifically for Indians.

THE INDIAN EDUCATION ACT OF 1972

The Indian Education Act of 1972, or Title IV, was designed to avoid the kinds of pitfalls encountered by past attempts to improve Indian education.

To insure Indian control of Indian education, the Act established two Indian governing bodies at the national level:

1. Office of Indian Education – this organization, headed by an Indian, administers all Federal grants for Indian education.
2. National Advisory Council for Indian Education – this is a group of 15 influential Indian leaders, who advise the OIE on Indian education.

At the local level, the Act requires that a committee of Indian parents be closely involved in project planning, in order for any school district to receive a Federal grant.

The provisions of the Act thus insure Indian control and participation at all levels in the process of granting Federal aid to Indian education.

Title IV in Sault Sainte Marie

An outstanding example of the Act in current use is given by the Sault Sainte Marie school district in Michigan. In the district, about 1,000 Indian school children are involved in special Title IV projects. Some of the many project activities include the following:

1. A teacher/counselor teaching a course on social, cultural and economic contribution of Indians to today's society.
2. A home-school coordinator who assists in the communication between parents and school personnel.
3. An early childhood education project, using the "open-concept" approach to learning.
4. Individual instruction in reading and mathematics by Indian teacher aides.

The Sault Sainte Marie program is not the only Title IV success story. Other school systems throughout the country are also showing what can be achieved by school districts and parent committees working together.

HOW CAN SCHOOL PERSONNEL HELP?

To realize the full benefits of Title IV, school personnel can assist the parent committee in three ways:

1. By providing equipment, facilities and services for routine committee activities. These should be easy to provide, at little cost to the school, and will be a big help to the committee.
2. By allowing access to school records. Access alone, however, may do little good unless someone is made available to explain the records to the committee. The school can help greatly by assigning personnel to this task.
3. By encouraging committee involvement in decisions regarding educational projects. This is basic to the letter and spirit of Title IV.

Some of this may be difficult, because needs assessment, project planning and evaluation may entail complex procedures. The Office of Indian Education has provided this information kit to aid this effort. The kit will speed up the committee's learning process and reduce the load on school personnel.

PARENT COMMITTEE ACTIVITIES

CODE K-6
DATE 9/3/76

INTRODUCTION

Part A of Title IV (the Indian Education Act of 1972) provides money for the special educational needs of Indian children through the school district. To apply for the money, each school district must have an Indian parent committee, to shape and direct its Title IV, Part A project. In order to encourage greater involvement by Indian parents, the Office of Indian Education has sponsored the development of a Title IV, Part A Information Kit. One component of the kit is a filmstrip called Parent Committee Activities. The document you are now reading is a supplementary companion to that filmstrip.

TWO KINDS OF ACTIVITIES

The activities of the Indian parent committee may be conveniently grouped in two categories: general activities and special activities. General activities are the things every committee must do to keep itself functioning as an organized group. Special activities are the things each committee must do to accomplish its purpose. Special activities represent the real work of the committee. General activities make it all possible.

General Activities

The general activities of the Indian parent committee include the following:

1. Nominating and selecting members – Identifying people in the community who could help by serving on the committee. Choosing new members from that group.

2. Electing officers – Choosing committee leaders, such as chairperson, vice chairperson, and secretary.

3. Writing and revising bylaws – Maintaining clearly written rules by which the committee must operate.

4. Establishing committee calendar – Listing the dates and events important to the committee in the coming year. Working backward from each date, to identify and schedule the actions the committee must take to get things done on time.

5. Scheduling and holding meetings – Getting the members of the committee together to make decisions and conduct other business.

6. Scheduling and holding public hearings – Getting members of the community together to make decisions or to voice opinions on important issues.

7. Keeping records – Collecting and organizing information about committee work, to aid in making better decisions.

8. Working with other organizations – Building a spirit of cooperation with other groups, especially the school district. Sharing information with them.

9. Training committee members – Getting new members acquainted with specific job assignments, then supporting them until they are able to do the jobs effectively.

Special Activities

The special activities of the committee include the following:

1. Assessing needs of Indian students – Identifying Indian children, identifying their special educational needs, and selecting those needs that should receive top priority.

2. Preparing project plan – Describing a plan aimed at satisfying one or more of the special educational needs of the Indian children. Defining goals, objectives and activities, including a schedule. Setting up a budget, covering salaries, equipment, facilities and supplies. Providing a plan for evaluating the results of the project and the use of project money. Revising the project plan where necessary, especially if, later on, the grant is smaller than expected.

PREPARED FOR OIE BY XYZYX INFORMATION CORPORATION, CANOGA PARK, CALIFORNIA

3. Preparing grant application – Preparing the necessary formal documents needed to request funds for the project. Making it clear to the Office of Indian Education that the committee was selected in the proper way, the school district worked with the committee in preparing the plan, and a public hearing was held involving the Indian community.

4. Evaluating project – Monitoring the project as called for by the evaluation plan. Checking to see how much good the Indian students are getting from the effort. Checking to see how the money is being spent. Making sure Indian personnel and materials are used wherever possible. Reporting on the results.

FINAL COMMENTS

For further information on parent committee activities, see Parent Committee Procedures, in Volume 2 of the Title IV, Part A Information Kit. The procedures are written in step-by-step form. They are understandable to committee members who have had very little past experience in this kind of work.

INDIAN EDUCATION COMMITTEE

An American Indian Cultural Center was established at Sligo Junior High in Silver Spring and has offered a setting for meetings of the Parent Committee and workshops for the students. Instructional programs on American Indian history, traditional song and dance, beadwork, and leathercraft have been presented. Reference materials on American Indian history and culture, religion, cooking, and traditional dress are available in the center. A collection of language tapes, slides, videotapes, and black and white photographs has been started and is being catalogued so that materials on a variety of subjects will be available.

The Parent Committee continued to meet on a monthly basis for regular business matters and when necessary for special business. Two full-time staff persons were hired and closely supervised by the permanent committee chairperson, who was elected in February, 1977. Four subcommittees were formed to carry out committee business in the areas of materials and equipment, programs, public relations, and bylaws. Members of the committee attended a conference on Title IV. They presented several workshops for staff of Montgomery County Public Schools and developed an in-service course for fall, 1977. A parent worked with Montgomery County Public Schools Publications Department to develop an American Indian Multiethnic Reminder publication. A needs assessment survey was undertaken in January, 1977, and the results of the survey were used to develop the proposal for grant year 77-78.

A total of fifteen instructional workshops and three special programs were coordinated for the students. Local Indian cultural experts were invited to participate in the activities as advisors, consultants, or presenters of exhibits and/or programs. The training of students in their own cultural heritage has begun, and they are learning the skills for sharing their knowledge with their non-Indian peers. Students are also participating in the planning and implementation of programs at the cultural center.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY PUBLIC SCHOOLS
DEPARTMENT OF HUMAN RELATIONS
POLICY STATEMENT

A fundamental goal of the Montgomery County Public Schools is to establish and maintain and atmosphere in which students and staff can develop attitudes for effective, cooperative living, including:

1. Respect for the individual, regardless of economic status, intellectual ability, race, creed, color religion, sex or,age;

2. Respect for cultural differences;

3. Respect for the economic, political, and social rights of others; and

4. Respect for the right of others to seek and maintain their own identities.

The school system must continue to reexamine all the parts of the curriculum thoroughly to make sure that it reflects a policy of positive human relations. The instructional materials used in the schools must reflect the history, contributions, and culture of the various ethnic groups in our society. Children from minority groups must be helped to establish their identity with their own ethnic group as well as with the society as a whole.

It is essential for the school system to provide training opportunities for all staff members so that they may become more sensitive to the needs of all children and adults. It is also essential that students, parents, and citizens become more knowledgeable about problems of human relations in the school and the community.

The school system must continue to reexamine its policies and procedures to determine their effect on individual and group behavior and to make changes where improvement of human relations is possible.

The Montgomery County Public Schools shall continue to make opportunities for employment and promotion available to every candidate solely on the basis of his qualifications and without regard to religion, ethnic, or racial origin.

The school system shall utilize every opportunity to work with other institutions and agencies in the community. In addition, the school system should continue to make channels available through which citizens can communicate their concerns about human relations problems and their intellectual and moral resources for improvement.

Call Human Relations, 279-3166.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY PUBLIC SCHOOLS
THE ACTION TEAM FOR QUALITY INTERGRATED EDUCATION

EMERGENCY SCHOOL AID ACT
TITLE VII

The Action Team for Quality Integrated Education was funded under the Emergency School Aid Act, Title VII. The team was approved by the MCPS Board of Education on August 23, 1976. The basic thrust of the team is to support staffs in schools which are undergoing change due to desegregation/closure decisions during the 1977-78 school year. The team maintains a Multicultural Center, which houses materials and other resources on cultural diversity and also serves as a training facility for staff development activities and parent seminars.

Two groups of schools are involved in the program. The first group has intensive involvement and the second group a minimal amount of involvement. The intensively treated schools have direct and immediate service when needed from members of the Action Team. The schools with minimal involvement use the resources in the Multicultural Center and participate in the training programs for teachers.

The general focus of support in these schools is in the areas of human relations, mulitcultural education, ESOL/bilingual education, classroom organization/management, reading, and parent involvement.

Personnel for the Action Team include:

1 Project Coordinator
5 Teacher Specialists
6 ESOL/Bilingual Teachers
7 Teacher Assistants
1 Secretary
1 Clerk-Typist (half-time)

The team members bring with them various skills needed to implement the program, including skills in human relations, curriculum development and implementation, organization and management, teacher training, and parent participation.

The activities of the Action Team include the following:

- Promotes the appreciation of cultural diversity through training programs and on-site support activities and resources.
- Provides assistance to staffs in classroom organization and management that promotes positive human relations.
- Provides assistance to some limited English speaking students in order that they may make a smoother transition from ESOL classrooms to regular classroom activities.
- Maintains a Multicultural Center to serve as a focus for staff training, materials support, and parent involvement. This Center is also available to public and nonpublic schools minimally involved in the project.
- Provides support to schools in planning programs for parents, to encourage their involvement in school activities and promote good human relations.

Consistent with the goals of the Board of Education, the project is designed to help improve the quality of education for all children by bringing supplemental services and resources to support the Board's desegregation/closure efforts.

This project is now being funded by Montgomery County Board of Education.

Action Team for Quality Integrated Education

EVALUATION GUIDELINES FOR MATERIALS ABOUT NATIVE AMERICANS

1. Would the book help an Indian identify with and be proud of his heritage? In what ways?

2. Does the book express Indian values? How? Might the book help an Indian reader to reconcile his own values with conflicting ones?

3. How might the book affect the Indian person's image of himself?

4. How might the book affect the non-Indian reader's image of Indian people?

5. Is Indian culture being evaluated in terms of its own values and attitudes, and not in terms of those of another culture?

6. Is the image presented of the Indian one of a real human being, with strengths and weaknesses, acting in response to his own nature and his own times?

7. Are the images of the Indian stereotyped? Of stereotyping, Alvin M. Josephy, Jr., says in his book, The Indian Heritage of America (Knopf, 1968, page 8):

   > More common among most whites are the false understandings and images which they retain about Indians. For many, the moving pictures, television and comic strips have firmly established a stereotype as the true portrait of all Indians: the dour, stoic, warbonneted Plains Indian. He is a warrior, he has no humor unless it is that of an incongruous and farcical type, and his language is full of "hows," "ughs," and words that end in "um." Only rarely in the popular media of communications is it hinted that Indians, too, were and are all kinds of real living persons like any others, and that they included peace-loving wise men, mothers who cried for the safety of their children, young men who sang songs of love and courted maidens, dullards, statesmen, cowards and patriots. Today there are college-trained Indians, researchers, business and professional men and women, jurists, ranchers, teachers and political office holders. Yet so enduring is the stereotype that many a non-Indian, especially if he lives in an area where Indians are not commonly seen, expects any American Indian he meets to wear a feathered headdress. When he sees the Indian in a conventional business suit instead, he is disappointed.

8. If fictional, are the characters realistically developed? Are situations true or possible true to Indian ways of life?

9. Does the book present both sides of the event, issue, problem, etc.? What additional information might be needed to make the book more relevant, useful or to present both sides? Is comparable information presented more effectively in another book?

10. Does the book contain any factual errors or misleading information? Does it perpetuate myths about the American Indian?

11. Are the contributions of American Indians to Western civilization given in rightful and accurate representation?

12. Are loaded words (i.e., chief, savage, buck, squaw, red skin, etc.) used in such a way as to be needlessly offensive, insensitive, inappropriate?

13. Do the illustrations authentically depict Indian ways of life?

14. What are the author's qualifications to write a book dealing with American Indians?

15. Has the book been reviewed or evaluated by a person who is knowledgeable about American Indians as well as about the subject of the book?

16. Where and how might this book be used in a school curriculum to increase awareness and understanding of the American Indian?

INDIAN TRAVELING TRUNK

This trunk may be booked through E&S. It circulates for one week and must be picked up. Call 279-3271

POTTERY:

The white based pottery is done by Dodie Kline, a full-blooded member of the Isleta Pueblo, New Mexico, using the coil method but firing in a commercial kiln since the traditional firing technique cannot be utilized in this metropolitan area.

The red based pottery is done by the Pamunkey potterers using their own native clay from their reservation near King William, Virginia. The pots are decorated and fired in a commercial kiln by the five ladies who constitute the Pamunkey potterers. (fish shaped)

Miniature Chinana Jemez (there pieces)

DOLLS:

Navajo - modern ceremonial - man and woman
Seminole Indians of Florida - woman

DISPLAY CASE:

Stones, beads, shells, etc. (Thirteen pieces)

Jewelry (five pieces) (Zia earrings missing)

Indian Artifacts - arrowheads, etc. (twenty pieces)

In Addition.

Knife (Potomac River)

Child's Ball

Nutcracker

Axe

Tomahawk

BASKETS:

There are three baskets in this collection. One is a Mohawk strawberry basket, called such because it is made to resemble a strawberry with curls and a cap. The basket is made from ash splints. The small sweetgrass basket is likewise Mohawk and the actual construction of the basket is the same as the splint basket except that sweetgrass is used instead of splints. Sweetgrass baskets are found from Maine to Michigan but other areas utilize various grasses in basketry. The Mississippi Choctaw miniature splint basket is an example of another form of splint basketry since the Mississippi Choctaws, and other southeastern tribes, use river cane instead of hardwood for splints.

The basket is handmade by Papago Indians of Arizona. Papago Indian baskets are made all by hand from the Yucca plant. Devil Claw is used for the black design. A little red is sometimes used from the root of the Yucca (wild banana plant). It is all a very slow process and one of the oldest of Indian crafts.

BEADWORK: A variety of the forms of beadwork are included in the collection:

The beaded hair ties are made using the lazy stitch of beadwork. The beads are strung on thread and stitched into place. It is fairly difficult to create designs with this method.

The daisy chain necklace included was made using the Apache technique of creating daisy chains. The difference between the Apache and other techniques is primarily in the beads used. Daisy chains are created by stringing beads on thread and composing daisy chain figures by manipulating thread back through beads.

The corn bead necklace is a very simple form of beadwork utilizing corn beads (Job's tears) and pony beads to create a pleasing pattern.

The beaded headband is an example of loom beading. In loom beading, designs are created by carefully following patterns.

The beaded key chain is an example of the gourd stitch. There are not too elaborate designs in the gourd stitch which is created by stringing beads on thread and attaching the beads to the previous row.

LEAFLETS AND BOOKLETS:

The First Americans (approx. thirty)

Educational - (thirty-eight)

You Asked About Indians - (fifteen)

Indian Education

Indian Arts and Crafts

Famous Indians

Indian Cookbook

Other assorted books and leaflets

MISCELLANEOUS: The woven sash is created on the Inkle loom by Linda Russell. Woven belts are particularly useful for use with various tribal outfits.

128

The pipestone earrings are made by members of the Mississippi Sioux of Minnesota from native pipestone. Traditionally, pipes were carved and traded throughout the Great Lakes area.

The ojo was created by Vern Halley, a Tigua from Texas. This artform came from the Huichol Indians of Mexico and was absorbed by many Indian tribal groups as well as other Americans. The tribal groups have created several variations of the Ojo and the sample is of a four-stick based ojo. Other variations include the beautiful dawa which combines Hopi sunface symbols with Navajo weaving.

A national organization with a political, social, and cultural emphasis.

Association on American Indian Affairs, Inc. 432 Park Avenue South, New York, New York 10016.
The association conducts continuing programs in Indian economic and community development; health, education, and welfare; legal defense; public education; and the arts and crafts (through the American Indian Arts Center). It helps Indian tribes to mobilize all available resources--federal, state, and private--for a coordinated attack on the problems of poverty.
Publications: Indian Affairs (quarterly); Indian Family Defense (quarterly); also publishes books.

Coalition of Eastern Native Americans (CENA). 927 15th Street, Washington, D.C. 20005.
The goal of CENA is to assist in the economic, cultural, and social advancement of the Native American people in the eastern half of the United States. CENA serves as a means of communication for all member tribes, provides technical assistance to the Indian communities on matters relating to federal programs, and coordinates the services of state and federal agencies. It represents tribes from the states of Conn., Maine, Mass., R.I., N.J., N.Y., Penn., Delaware, Md., Va., Ala., Fla., N.C., S.C., Mich., Wis., La., and Ohio.

Commission on Indian Affairs. State of Maryland.
Originally part of the Commission on Afro-American and Indian History and Culture, the commission is charged with undertaking a comprehensive study of indigenous American Indian tribes and their influence upon Maryland history and culture. Also, the commission will study the economic and social needs of Indians in Maryland and make recommendations for the alleviation of such needs. Information developed by the commission that relates to Indian culture and history is to be dissemenated to the public.

National Indian Education Association (NIEA). Hubbard Building, Suite 100, 2675 Universtiy Avenue, St. Paul, Minnesota 55114.
The major objectives of the organization are to conduct educational conferences and workshops, to evaluate and improve state and local educational sources, to assess and coordinate technical assistance sources, to serve as a clearinghouse on Indian education affairs, and to bring Indian educators together as a united voice. NIEA sponsors lectures, panel discussions, and seminars for presentation to interested groups.
Publications: Indian Education (monthly).
